Rally Preparation Services (RPS) Nominated for Specialist of the Year at the International Historic Motoring Awards

Rally Preparation Services is honoured to be nominated for Specialist of the Year at this year's International Historic Motoring Awards. The nomination recognises RPS's integral role in preparing and supporting the 2025 Peking to Paris Rally–winning car, a Chevrolet "Fangio" Coupé driven by Tony Sutton and Andrew Lawson, as well as the third-place–finishing Chevrolet "Fangio" Coupé of Jorge and Cristobal Perez Companc.

From their headquarters in Witney, Oxfordshire, the RPS team's involvement extended far beyond vehicle preparation. Throughout the rally, RPS delivered vital technical support and expertly coordinated the sourcing and distribution of parts, ensuring competitors received essential components and the specialist knowledge needed to keep them moving along one of the world's toughest endurance routes.

This achievement adds to an impressive legacy of success that includes the 2010 and 2013 Peking to Paris winners, 2024 Sahara Challenge winners, 2023 Badawi Trail winners, and Scuderia Rapida's overall victory at the 2022 Monte Carlo Historic Rally. RPS was also previously shortlisted for the same award in 2016, following their preparation of twenty five cars leaving the workshops for that year's Peking to Paris Rally. These milestones mark just a few of the highlights from RPS's 18-year history at the forefront of historic rallying.

Beyond their rally achievements, RPS provides a comprehensive range of specialist services to classic and historic rally enthusiasts around the world. Their expertise covers full rally car builds, preparation, and restoration, as well as event support, driver and co-driver training, logistics, concierge vehicle storage, and project management. In addition, RPS offers bespoke engineering solutions and performance upgrades, ensuring every vehicle they prepare is rally-ready and capable of performing at its peak under the most demanding conditions.

These accomplishments reflect RPS's deep engineering expertise and enduring commitment to reliability, precision, and performance. From meticulous preparation in the workshop to expert support in the field, Rally Preparation Services continues to set the standard for excellence in historic rallying, upholding the spirit of classic motoring and driving it forward into the future.
